- 1) Which of the proposal essays in SMG Ch. 7 was the most interesting to you? Why?
 - a. The most interesting essay was Starting High School Later by David Figlio because I remember this was being debated a lot when I was in high school. The fact that many believe that students should start school later in order to get more sleep and be prepared for school rather than forcing them to wake up much earlier than is recommended by doctors. Personally, I usually only had about 6 hours of sleep and there were times when it was hard waking up and go to school before the sun was even up with the low temperature. It would be interesting to see how schools would improve if they began later in the day.
- 2) Is it good or bad for one's thesis statement to be an "arguable assertion"? Explain.
 - a. No, it is not bad to have an arguable assertion because the three main things that a reader needs to look for in a thesis is if its arguable, clear, and appropriately qualified. In order to have a successful thesis your topic must be arguable and not a fact.
